

EPISODE 12: ALL'S WELL THAT ENDS BETTER

This final episode of "Lunchtime" sees Kalle and Mo celebrating a commendation for their solid safety record. It's a big day, especially for Kalle who is busy phrasing a poetic acceptance speech about his spearheading role as the HS&E battering ram. But does he actually get to hold his speech? Find out in our latest – and ultimate – installment "All's well that ends better".

EPISODE 12:
ALL'S WELL THAT ENDS BETTER

WWW.ROLLS-ROYCE.COM/LUNCHTIME

ZERO HARM

SAFETY BITES: LUNCHTIME

THE BEST TO FINAL

A Rolls-Royce
solution

ALL'S WELL THAT ENDS BETTER

It took them twelve episodes, but they finally made it: Kalle and Mo are being commended for their contribution to workplace safety. Although the award signals the end of our “Lunchtime” sitcom, safety at work is remaining firmly fixed at the top of our agenda.

The company has launched a number of initiatives in recent years, uniting the entire workforce from shop floor to top floor in developing a robust safety culture at Rolls-Royce Power Systems – with measurable results.

Kalle and Mo also helped to keep discussions going and sharpen the focus on occupational safety even more.

Maybe you'll remember our two HS&E Heroes the next time you notice a potential hazard. Because everyone can help to prevent industrial accidents and work-related illness. So do your bit to make sure you and your colleagues get home safe and sound – every day.

With this in mind – Lunchtime! And play it safe!

Tips from Kalle and Mo:

- Stick to the rules to avoid hazardous situations. Even if it sometimes takes a little more time and effort, workplace safety always pays off in the end.
- Stay alert: Report or rectify any potential hazards, unsafe practices or dangerous conditions you come across. And watch out for your own safety in particular.
- Stay focused – avoid distraction.